ALL IN, ALL THE TIME

Midnight Miracle

It was 12:47 AM when the call came through. A mother's panicked voice crackled over the dispatch line – her infant was unresponsive. Within seconds, Chaim B*, a Hatzolah volunteer living two blocks away bolted out of bed and raced into the icy night.

Arriving in just under two minutes, he found the mother clutching her baby, pale and limp. Without hesitation, he began infant CPR, his training taking over as he worked tirelessly to restore the baby's tiny breaths. When paramedics arrived, the baby had a faint pulse – thanks to the first responder's intervention.

The volunteers didn't stop there.

They rode in the ambulance, calming the mother, assisting with medical needs, and staying at the hospital until the cause of the episode was revealed: A sudden high fever had caused a febrile seizure, impairing the infant's breathing. When he was declared stable hours later, this family knew:

Hatzolah is a lifeline. An ALL-IN lifeline.

The Unexpected Hero

Lights. Cameras. Action.

At a bustling outdoor community event, a sudden commotion drew the attention of nearby Hatzolah volunteers. One section of the bleachers had collapsed, injuring several people. Volunteer EMT Yaakov H.* was enjoying the event with his family but immediately sprang into action, calling for additional support.

Yaakov helped triage the injured, prioritizing a young child with severe lacerations and a man showing signs of shock. With bystanders' help, he managed to stabilize the child and used his training to carefully assess and support the man until more help arrived.

As a group of Hatzolah volunteers converged on the scene, the emergency medical response team worked in well-orchestrated fashion. B"H there were no life-threatening injuries, and everyone involved felt cared for and calm.

No panic. No delays. No drama.

Just an ALL-IN group of volunteers.

Celebrating Life

There's something some people don't realize about choking, it doesn't just happen to toddlers.

Boruch L.* is a longtime Hatzolah paramedic. One clear spring evening, he was celebrating his only son's Bar Mitzvah.

Every part of the simcha felt momentous – but there was no moment more special than young Chaim's Siyum on a masechta he'd been learning for over a year with his father.

As hashgacha would have it, that was also the moment Boruch's radio crackled to life. Someone was choking on his steak in the restaurant next door.

Without missing a beat, he quietly slipped out of his position of honor next to his son. He sprinted out one door and into the other and arrived first on scene – finding a panicking wife and her husband – choking, but still conscious.

Heimlich. And again. And again.

The offending piece of meat dislodged, the grateful man took a few deep, shuddering breaths. And Boruch? He returned to the hall just in time to hear the final words of his son's speech – “Thank you, Abba, for teaching me what it means to be there for others even when it is difficult.”

All-IN. At ALL times. The Hatzolah way.

ALL GOOD CALLS. all in CALLS.

False Alarm in the Middle of the Night

Sometimes Hatzolah volunteers get called for what turns out to be a false alarm in the middle of the night. For example, a panicked parent might call because their child is "unresponsive" – only for the volunteer to find that the child has simply fallen asleep in an awkward position that made them look like they were in distress.

Real Emergency in the Middle of the Night

Sometimes Hatzolah volunteers get called in the middle of the night for a genuine emergency that requires immediate action. For example, a panicked parent might call because their child is "unresponsive" – and the volunteer arrives to find the child in real distress, needing urgent medical care and stabilization.

I Just Wanted a Ride

Sometimes, patients will call Hatzolah for non-emergency transport. They might want to go to the hospital for something minor, and when the volunteer arrives, they sheepishly explain that they just need a ride, not a medical emergency.

I Really Do Need a Ride to the Hospital!

Usually, patients call Hatzolah because they urgently need an ambulance for a medical emergency. When the volunteer arrives, they understand the gravity of the situation and transport them without delay.

I Think I'm Allergic to Chocolate!

Sometimes, people call Hatzolah for what they believe to be serious medical issues, like a suspected food allergy. In some cases, callers think they are experiencing a severe allergic reaction, only to find out that their symptoms are caused by overeating chocolate. Volunteers often must explain that excessive chocolate consumption is usually not a medical emergency, but they always encourage caution and remind people that it's better to check than to ignore potential issues.

I Can't Believe I'm Allergic to Chocolate!

Sometimes, people call Hatzolah thinking their symptoms are mild and not serious. A parent thinks her child has an upset stomach after eating chocolate, or they think it's just a slight allergic reaction. However, the volunteer arrives and assesses the situation and realizes that the symptoms point to a more serious allergic reaction, such as anaphylaxis, which can be life-threatening. Hatzolah volunteers take all concerns seriously and act quickly to ensure the appropriate medical attention is given.

The Over-prepared Patient

Occasionally, someone calls Hatzolah for help, only to have them arrive and find that the patient is already dressed in their "hospital clothes", prepared for a big dramatic journey. It's as if they're already planning for a hospital stay, even if they just needed a little help with something minor like a bruised ankle.

The Under-prepared Patient

Often, someone calls Hatzolah for help, and when the volunteers arrive, they find that the patient is underprepared for their situation. Instead of looking overly dramatic or dressed for a hospital stay, the patient is on the way to a simcha, not a hospital visit, yet they need some convincing that their emergency is more serious than it appears.

The Severity of the Paper Cut

Hatzolah volunteers may respond to what appears to be a serious emergency, only to discover that the issue is something as small as a paper cut. While paper cuts can be painful, these calls often bring lighthearted moments as volunteers calmly reassure the patient that an ambulance isn't necessary for such a minor injury. This serves as a reminder that it's better to seek assistance when unsure, as what seems like a major problem may often be less significant than initially thought.

When a Paper Cut Turns Out to Be More Serious

There are times when a situation that seems minor at first can turn out to be far more serious. What someone believes to be a simple paper cut might be a deeper wound, possibly leading to significant bleeding or infection that requires immediate medical care. While a small cut may seem trivial to some, it's always important to stay cautious and seek professional help to ensure that even minor injuries are properly treated.
